

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

Community service permeates all levels of the firm, reflected in wide-ranging engagements around our community. From social equity initiatives to introducing architecture and design to young students, Hennebery Eddy strives to model civic engagement within our industry and beyond.

A FIRM COMMITMENT

Our “Hennebery Eddy Gives” program reflects the firm’s long-standing belief that giving is good for the community, good for business, demonstrates leadership, and is personally rewarding. Our program supports charitable giving through a matching gift program and firm contributions to charitable and nonprofit organizations, and volunteering, pro bono services, a community service scholarship, and community volunteering. We extend our contributions into two volunteer days strategically focused on social and environmental sustainability, in addition to our financial and in-kind donations to organizations such as Mercy Corps, Habitat for Humanity, Oregon Food Bank, Oregon Rail Heritage Foundation, and the Portland Children’s Museum.

Hennebery Eddy is a signatory of the AIA Public Architecture 1+ Program, pledging 500+ hours annually. Pro bono work is meaningful because it is done for the common good, enriching our staff and our firm by offering professional experience and skills for the benefit of the community. We encourage all staff to bring forward pro bono project ideas.

CIVIC SERVICE

The firm’s principals and staff have held positions as City of Portland Design Commissioners, City of Gresham Design Commissioners, Regional Arts and Culture Council members, City of Portland Historic Landmarks Commissioner, and more. Associate principal Jon McGrew is the Design-Build Institute of America events and education committee chair. Associate principal Alexander Lungershausen serves on the board of directors of the Construction Specifications Institute and is actively involved in bringing high-profile architects practicing internationally to Portland to present their work each spring. See expanded list on following page.

PERSONAL VOLUNTEERING

Staff are encouraged to become engaged citizens in areas of personal interests ranging from the City of Portland Minority Evaluator Program to volunteer work with Portland Public Schools. This commitment to our community not only serves a need, it provides an opportunity to strengthen our team through shared experiences. See expanded list on following page.
